THE STATE OF THE CONFEDERACY ADDRESS

The Eve of Destruction By Craig Maus

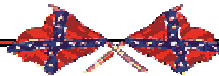

My Dear Confederate Brothers & Sisters,

We fought the 'Second' American Revolution 148 years ago because the structure of government that all states had previously agreed to, upon entering into a voluntary union, was broken! Despite the fact that we exercised our legal right to secede, as was our option should we so choose under the provisions granted to us by the 10th Amendment of the US Constitution, we nevertheless were invaded. The cause for that war had absolutely nothing to do with the issue of slavery. That was a side-issue, perhaps, but just that, a side issue at best.

Today, those who have invaded us and overthrew our legitimate Confederate Government have massaged and homogenized the slavery issue to the effect that most Americans today actually believe that was the cause of the war. They have actually been dumbed down to believe that it was a war of morality, yet, along with so many other facts that have either been conveniently omitted, left out or ignored, is that, of the 650,000 men who went to their deaths, more than 90% of them had absolutely no interest, concern, or connection with the institution of slavery whatsoever. It is important to note these simple facts because there are some in our ranks today who still cling to the belief that our ongoing struggle is merely a heritage issue. Nothing could be further from the truth! To believe or embrace such a theory is to deny and recant everything that we once were and why we fought to begin with.

The reason why I have prefaced these comments is to understand that as modern day Confederates, in pursuit of that which was taken from us by force, although race was not an issue then, it most certainly is today. We need to understand that, and we need to understand its meaning and purpose, both from a tactical perspective and as a measure of control that our invaders continue to employ against us, and we MUST TALK ABOUT IT OPENLY AND FRANKLY for what it is!

Lincoln did not invent the concept of Divide and Conquer. He learned it from his studies and readings of The Communist Manifesto and from the Socialists within Europe at that time. Since our defeat, this ever basic concept has been used over and over against us during these last 148 years. Sovereign laws have been constantly revised and overturned in order to raise the status and symbols of the Central Government while systematically using and employing any and all means, most notably special interest groups, to do their bidding in order to retain their power and expand their base. As such, this Nation has slipped into an abyss without most people even suspecting or knowing it while willingly allowing their identity as State Citizens to become federalized and their revered freedoms to be compromised along with it, often at times in the name of 'patriotism'.

All this, I submit, is a well-conceived extension of those planned efforts that our Society's resident historian, Secretary-Treasurer and Chaplain, Mr. Al Benson, points out ever so eloquently in the 4th Quarter Volume 10 of his Copperhead Chronicles, whereby he states, "there was a persistent effort on the part of apostate Northern Unitarians to render the fabric of society in a basically Calvinistic South. Whereas many Southern folks still held to a large degree the truth of the sovereignty of God, Northern Unitarians, mostly abolitionists, and their revolutionary cousins in Europe having long ago rejected biblical truth and embracing statism and centralized power as their messiah." As Al concludes, "thus, after the shooting phase of the War of Northern Aggression was over, northern radicals rushed in to administer the coup de grace to a Calvinistic South. Apostate revolution was thus renamed 'RECONSTRUCTION'."

Does anyone seriously believe that our interests and welfare are being 'represented' in Washington? Let us look at their propoganda machine, and please remember, as pointed out earlier, they have been revising and homogenizing it for over 148 years:

Divide & Conquer- Lesson 101:

- Institute: A guilt ridden issue in order to separate the masses while appearing 'impartial' with the real agenda hidden and disguised so cleverly that no one outside of their 'inner circle' would ever suspect?
- The Challenge: What key or central entity could be created THAT WOULD ADVANCE their structure at all levels?
- The Solution: Hmm - what about race? Now that is surely divisive and, over time, ultimately implemented and introduced on an on-going basis over several generations through a controlled federally educated public school system, and what do you get? The best of all world's with the 'blind' literally leading the decapitated! Student (dumbed down) ultimately becomes the teacher and so on and so forth. Couple this with mass media barrages, and likewise over time, with ever increasing messages coming right into your living room and look at what they have accomplished! Some will argue that this is delusional, but is it? Haven't we seen efforts as these throughout World History and carried out by men with similar ambitions? The playing field doesn't change, just the characters. That's why our Founding Fathers were so exacting in their preparations and verbiage so that no one could ever redefine our country's purpose, but it was redefined after the War for Southern Independence, wasn't it? Of this there is no doubt. Thus, they introduced their counter-culture, and in turn, any who would raise practical questions would be painted with the broad brush of RACISM and literally ostracized from their society unable to be seen or heard from ever again. Still delusional some will argue? How many times have we seen this with men and women losing their jobs and forfeiting their careers? This is no less the same than those Puritans who created for themselves some very pleasing positions during the Salem witch-hunts when all that was necessary was a mere accusation. Not a bad outcome I would say if you're sitting where they are sitting.
- The History thus far: Since the 60's, it has been a Racial Divide, created and orchestrated by those powers in Washington to avert attention from the real issues. From this, the then fledgling NAACP, various Black Caucuses hence within Federal, State, and Local Governments, the Negro College Fund, the Miss Black America Pageant, The Black Entertainment Channel, The Black Music Awards, Black History Month, the likes of the Sharptons, Jacksons, and so many others that have followed, have established the very counter culture that serves not only themselves but their master and overseer of all time, their Federal Demagogue! Each of them is in lockstep with their master, pretending to be one thing to their people but lavishing themselves between two cultures at the expense of each. How utterly simple and how utterly vile and despicable. All this as the white race is held hostage under a separate set of Washington's hypocritical laws! It is a Double Standard in the very least, beyond morally corrupt, and wrong at best. Al Sharpton and Jesse Jackson can spew their vile RACISM and NOT be held to any account. They can assault and suggest wrong-doings that don't exist without any fear for retribution. Crooks often tell us that if you want to hide something of value where it will not be stolen, hide it in plain sight. That is what is going on today. Beneath our very noses, a sacred cow has been created and established with all the provisions and privileges granted to them, at our expense, that Washington systematically promotes and encourages. It is nothing more than polarization of the worse kind that only benefits the power brokers while hurting the people of this country, black & white alike!
- This is our dilemma- what to do: First, it must be recognized for what it truly is, reverse discrimination and racism, and it must be talked about openly and frankly and not behind closed doors for fear of retribution. This 'Race Thing' is an illusion ripe with false guilt and will only distance us from our true and legitimate Mission if we allow it to! As stated, although not the issue for which we fought 148 years ago, it is very much part of today's landscape. We cannot run away from it and pretend that what we do today is only because we want our Heritage to be recognized. That is only a poor excuse in order to avoid the real issues confronting us. Does anyone seriously think that our enemies will ever give us 'the right time of day', much less leave a door open that recognizes our Confederate heritage when that heritage raises legal justification to our original existence? Y'all have to be a blatant ignoramus to think that will fly in the face of all this adversity they have laid upon us. You might as well look up in the sky for flying pigs. This has never been an issue of just Heritage. To accept that is to accept DEFEAT, and by God, that is NOT why we went to war or why our Confederate Military fought for so valiantly!

➤ Putting things into perspective:

- A Black Man is running for the Presidency.
- A black woman is currently Secretary of State.
- Oprah Winfrey is the richest woman in America.
- Black athletes are making millions of dollars.
- Special tests are provided by Washington and mandated to allow so-called 'minorities' to entitlements for job considerations.
- There are many black officials holding well paying jobs in government and municipal services as well as the private sector.
- Entitlement programs have been designed to favor 'minorities' at the expense of the competing white constituency.

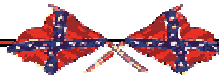

The list goes on and on and on while we, nonetheless, are continuously and constantly reminded of the so-called existing "racial barrier". What barrier I ask? For noting the obvious herein, I would be called a racist by those who fear the truth, but who would hold me in contempt of their court for it is easier to make an example of one in the hopes that they will discourage and scare away most others. Try to get "equal and fair" time today, and see where it gets you. It is no longer possible, because fairness, like the Independence we sought long ago during our 'second' American Revolution, was lost, and eventually, over time as mentioned, was altered, revised, and compromised at the hands of the usurper when we were defeated.

While employing race as a tactical advantage to keep us distracted, Washington races headlong and steadfastly into their commitment towards their "One World, New World Order," as expressed by the American President George Bush (the 1st) after the first Persian Gulf War.

The bankers today control this country despite the fact that Thomas Jefferson warned us "of NEVER letting the bankers get hold of our government." As such, they sleep with Washington and continually massage international currency through the various central banks around the world in an effort to create an economic labyrinth that will keep them all in power. The Federal Reserve, no more Federal than Federal Express, dances to Washington's tunes. Created in 1913, they have become the Treasurer for the government's money. When our government needs money, they go to the Federal Reserve, private bankers, to borrow it. How many within this country are even aware of this? They can print any amount of worthless paper they want, call it a Federal Reserve Note and play with your lives and mine and all in the name of inflation. In so doing, they can literally manipulate job availability across this country simply through money flow that will determine how many people can work and where. Combine this with no metal standard (gold, silver, etc.) as once existed to back this nation's currency, and what do you have - a formula for disaster! Such is the case at present with the subprime mess and such was the case back in the late 70s with the Savings & Loan debacle. Despite problems around the world that they are dealing with today, and will deal with tomorrow and the many days hereafter in order to realize their One World, New World Order orthodoxy, now affectionately referred to as GLOBALIZATION, they pursue this in our good names and use us to fight their wars in the name of patriotism. How utterly vile and vulgar.

All one has to do is examine our history and connect those simple dots that spelled Individualism and Sovereignty to see where we once were and to see where we now are. Children know little of our History. Most cannot locate Vietnam on a map, and just the other day, I was introduced to a man in his 30s who didn't even know what state Pearl Harbor was in! Yet he knew of the NAACP and Martin Luther King. What is wrong with this I ask you?

- Some final pieces of information: The dilemma of today did not begin in the 1960's. Its roots within this country took hold under Lincoln when he waged his illegal War of Northern Aggression against us that culminated with our defeat. Then as today, our people saw and understood what Washington, under Lincoln, was trying to create. The One World, New World Orthodoxy is NOT NEW! Its roots and seeds go back centuries. As Al Benson, the Confederate Society of America's learned Historian and Chaplain points out in his Copperhead Chronicle (Vol. # 10, 4th quarter, 2007):

".....to understand conditions in the South from the 1860's to the 1960's, one only has to retrace the steps back to the "RECONSTRUCTION" that took place in the Southern States after the war. It was one of the most shameful periods in American History. The War had proved that States Rights, even all of the Bill of Rights, was destined to be a myth. Congress rushed in with a "RECONSTRUCTION" program that could charitably be described as 'punitive' in nature. The object lesson to be taught was - don't mess with the powers in Washington - revolutionary, centralized power is the "New Order of the Age." Al further comments that, "In regard to 'Reconstruction,' radical Jacobin Thaddeus Stevens said, "It is intended to revolutionize their (the Southerners) principles and feelings...to work a radical reorganization in Southern institutions, habits and manners."

Stevens continued by plainly stating that the "true doctrine of Reconstruction is that the defeated rebels have "NO CIVIL or POLITICAL RIGHTS." As Al points out further, this speaks of the fourth plank of The Communist Manifesto. Al concludes by saying that, "theologically speaking, what Stevens was 'preaching' can be translated thusly - death to Calvinist or Reformed Christianity in the South! As the North is apostate, Christ-denying and revolutionary, so must the South be made over into the same image! Thus ensued the advent of Reconstruction, and the insidious invasion of carpetbaggers, theological, political, and otherwise, began." The Laws that followed put corrupt candidates into the former Confederate States, and what followed was plunder! What ultimately followed some 15 years afterwards and after the corrupt candidates pulled out, as there was not anything left to steal or rob, Southerner's began to take their States back. They would make sure that no carpetbaggers, black or white alike, would ever again control their States. The methodology to ensure this is what our enemies hold over our heads today. Whether or not you agree with it is subjective, but you can easily understand their motives. Thus, as Al points out, Washington became ever so centralized that any return to the old was impossible., and thus, along with their descendants, they began their new Social (World) Order....ever expanding, ever increasing over time without anyone ever knowing of how or where it all began, and as I have said on so many occasions, "When the South Lost, this Entire Nation Lost... only no one knew it at the time!" It should be noted, in conclusion, that at the war's end, Reconstruction was geared to promote both class hatred and a budding "civil rights" movement that would give latter-day Marxists a golden opportunity to ply their hate and venom in an area of the country that their grandfathers had worked arduously to plant anti-Christianity in.

This has all happened by design and NOT by chance!

God Save The South- for So Goes The South, So WILL Go This Nation!

We within The Confederate Society of America and those Organizations within The Confederate Alliance have never made any excuses as to who we are and that of our mission, to Restore that Confederate Government that was illegally stripped and taken from us through usurpation and invasion. Further, we don't hide behind the term of asking to be referred to as 'Southern.' We are CONFEDERATES and proud of it. It is to this end that we are committed. Our motto is simple, All For One, And One For All! It's our country, and the choice is simple, get involved or await the Eve of Destruction!

On behalf of everyone, I will remind any and all that the only thing standing and remaining as a beacon of hope for this country is the Restoration and Resurrection of our Confederacy. The Yankees can re-write or add whatever Amendments to their US Constitution to indemnify themselves of the actions they undertook against us. However, they must first address foremost, the simple fact that THEY BROKE THE LAW OF THE LAND AND THE ILLEGALITY OF THEIR ACTIONS CANNOT BE MADE LEGAL AFTER THE FACT! They are going to have to deal with this and within their Federal System that will indeed prove to be their Achilles heel after all!

Mr. Lincoln The Socialist

by Al Benson Jr.

Over the years I have contended that Abraham Lincoln was a socialist--not that he was a card-carrying member of some socialist group, but rather that his mindset had that bent. In that contention I have met all manner of reactions, everything from some who agree with me (and many do), to outright ridicule from Lincoln lovers in the North (and some in the South, too). Many seem to feel, although they would not express it in those terms, that Mr. Lincoln should be elevated to the level of Deity. Also, I have run across almost complete apathy in much of the South, and other sections of the country as well.

Southern folks at least used to know that Mr. Lincoln had been a less-than-desirable president; they knew he had been responsible for a lot of bad things during the "late unpleasantness" and that was about it. Many, no matter what their persuasion, had the thought (planted) in the back of their heads that, for all his faults, Lincoln was, at least, a "good" man. The contention that he was some kind of socialist really shakes them up, and mostly, they just don't want to hear anymore on the subject. It's not that they are apathetic--it's just that they don't know and they don't care. Please don't rattle their chain or rock their boat--just leave them fat and happy with their illusions.

Many years ago now, when I first began reading about the goodly number of socialists and outright Communists in Mr. Lincoln's armies, I began to have these nagging little doubts that, maybe, just maybe, Mr. Lincoln was not the honest, country hayseed that his promoters tried to make him out to be.

You often find tidbits of interesting history in places you would seldom look for them. For instance, I have never really cared for Carl Sandburg's six volume story of the life of Lincoln. I felt that much of it was just shameless promotion of the "great emancipator." Yet there had to be some truth in it.

Often that truth has been sanitized so that we don't quite grasp all its importance, but it is there. I will cite one small example. In chapter 22 of the first volume, on pages 84-85, Sandburg mentioned one Robert Owen, a "rich English businessman" who bought land in New Harmony, Indiana. He mentioned that Owen gave a speech before Congress telling how "...he and his companions were going to find a new way for people to live their lives together, without fighting, cheating, or exploiting one another...they would share and share alike, each for all and all for each."

Owen did, indeed, have a "new" way for the people in America to live together--it was and is, called socialism! Then Sandburg informed us that Mr. Lincoln knew about this colony of Owen's and, according to Sandburg "The scheme lighted up Abe Lincoln's heart." It is interesting that Mr. Sandburg didn't bother to tell his readers that Mr. Owen was a socialist and that his colony in Indiana was a socialist experiment, one that ultimately failed because of its socialism. Surely Sandburg must have been aware of that, given his own background (which will be dealt with in a later article). Why didn't he bother to inform his readers?

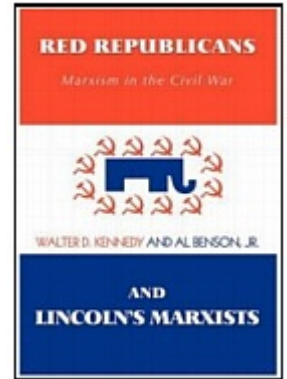

And if Lincoln, even in those early years of his life, was aware of Owen's undertaking, he must have had some idea of what Owen was all about. Lincoln, even as a young man, was ambitious. He was no country bumpkin.

Later in life, when Mr. Lincoln broke into politics, he was a great admirer of Henry Clay and of Clay's "vision" for America. For those who may not know a lot about Henry Clay, I would recommend a very revelatory article written by Thomas DiLorenzo that appeared in the March, 1998 issue of The Free Market, published by the Ludwig von Mises Institute. The title of Professor DiLorenzo's article was Henry Clay--National Socialist. Space will not permit here, but DiLorenzo aptly sets forth a blistering critique of Clay's socialism.

Lincoln eulogized Clay when he said "During my whole political life, I have loved and revered (Clay) as a leader and teacher." If Clay was a socialist and Lincoln considered him a great teacher and leader, what does that tell you about where Lincoln was coming from?

We are able to glean even further confirmation of Lincoln's socialist leanings from establishment "historian" James M. McPherson. In his book Abraham Lincoln and the Second American Revolution McPherson has noted, on pages 24-25: "Lincoln championed the leaders of the European revolutions of 1848; in turn, a man who knew something about those revolutions--Karl Marx--praised Lincoln in 1865 as 'the single-minded son of the working class' who had led his 'country through the matchless struggle for the rescue of an enchained race and the reconstruction of a social world." Stop and ponder just what Marx was referring to, and the language he used--"reconstruction of a social world." In actuality, neither Marx nor Lincoln had much use for blacks, but they did make good cannon fodder, and they contained grist for the socialist propaganda mill, and so both Marx and Lincoln exalted their "esteem" for them in their public pronouncements. Privately it was altogether something else. Marx even signed a letter to Lincoln, with others, congratulating him on his re-election in 1864, and Lincoln reportedly responded warmly. It was just enough of this kind of information that led Donnie Kennedy and I to write our new book Red Republicans And Lincoln's Marxists <http://olesouthbooks.com> in which we pointed out clearly the socialist origins of the Republican Party and Lincoln's affinity for socialists and Communists.

In this book we dealt with the fact of a noted socialist and Communist presence in the Union Armies during the War of Northern Aggression. For years this was a studiously ignored fact. No one that wrote about the war talked about it--you weren't supposed to be aware of it or even dare to think in those terms at all. Were you to become aware of a major socialist presence in the Union Armies, it just might begin to change your perception of what the war was really all about (Marxist revolution). I realise that, for the average Southerner, it was about liberty and repelling the invasion of his homeland; for the Yankee, it was about empire, financial gain, and growing centralized government control over everyone's lives and control over people's lives was the elixir of life for the socialists. The fact that Communists and socialists from the failed 1848 revolts in Europe flocked to join Lincoln's armies is only now beginning to be dealt with, and even now, most authors who do mention it tend to downplay the significance of it and to try to move their readers along to the "more important" things, such as who won which battle where. Don't dwell too long on Lincoln and his socialist buddies. It might change your perspective and we can't have too much of that now, can we.

Lincoln's entire life reveals an ongoing affinity for socialism and for those that practiced and promoted it. Once this is fully grasped, it will enable us to lay hold of the fact that, for the federal government in Washington, D.C. in the 1860s, the Northern victory in the War of Northern Aggression was another giant step in the program of socialist revolution that would, in time, reveal itself as the New World Order.

“Lincoln was a deep-grounded infidel. He disliked and despised churches. He never entered a church except to scoff and ridicule. On coming from the church he would mimic the preacher. Before running for any office he wrote a book against Christianity and the Bible. He showed it to some friends and read extracts. A man named Hill was greatly shocked and urged Lincoln not to publish it. Urged it would kill him politically, Hill got this book in his hands, opened the stove door, and it went up in flames and ashes. After that, Lincoln became more discreet, and when running for office often used words and phrases to make it appear that he was a Christian. He never changed on this subject. He lived and died a deep-grounded infidel.” Quoted by long-time friend and partner of Lincoln's, William H. Herndon

CONFEDERATE CHAPLAINS' CORNER

THE MADDEST, MOST INFAMOUS REVOLUTION IN HISTORY The Religious Cause of the War Between the States and the Reconstruction of the South By Rev. Joe Morecraft, III Pastor, Chalcedon Presbyterian Church Cummings, Georgia

On the Beverly Hillbillies the other evening, when Granny was asked what the Civil War was, she answered: "That was when the North invaded America."

After serving in the Union Army, James A. Garfield served for seventeen years in the U.S. Congress, before becoming President of the United States. In his first speech in the House of Representatives on January 28, 1864, "he called for the confiscation of the land of the Confederate planters, and its redistribution among freed slaves and white Unionists in the South." (p. 4) Garfield went on to say that, after their land was confiscated, "the [Confederate] leaders of this rebellion must be executed or banished...." These were harsh measures, Garfield admitted, but "let no weak sentiments of misplaced sympathy deter us from inaugurating a measure which will cleanse our nation and make it the fit home of freedom." (pp. 4-5)

In 1866, in another speech before the U.S. House, Garfield "renewed his call for revolutionary change to be imposed on the South by its northern conquerors. Since southern whites, he said in early 1867, 'would not cooperate with us in rebuilding what they had destroyed, we must remove the rubbish and rebuild from the bottom....' (p.5) "This rhetoric of revolution was hardly unique to Garfield. Numerous abolitionists, radical Republicans, and radical army officers were saying the same things, [not counting the Unitarian preachers of New England]. The Abolitionist Wendell Phillips was the most articulate spokesman for a revolutionary policy. He insisted that the Civil War 'is primarily a social revolution.... The war can only be ended by annihilating that oligarchy which formed and rules the South and makes the war—by annihilating a state of society—The whole social system of the Gulf States must be taken to pieces.' The congressional leader of the radical Republicans, Thaddeus Stevens, was equally outspoken. We must 'treat this war as a radical revolution,' he said. Reconstruction must revolutionize Southern institutions, habits and manners.... The foundations of their institutions must be broken up and re-laid, or all our blood and treasure have been spent in vain." (pp.5-6)

This view that the War Between the States was a religious and social revolution was internationally held. Karl Marx, who followed the war with keen interest, described it as a "world transforming... revolutionary movement." (p. 6) Georges Clemenceau of France wrote of it as "one of the most radical revolutions known in history." (p. 7) The pro-Confederate Times of London "described the radical Republicans [of the North] as the Jacobins of the second American Revolution," (p. 7), meaning by that they, as the radicals of the French Revolution of 1789, were radical blood-thirsty fanatics who craved the overthrow of a Christian moral order in America. Other newspapers described these radical pro-war Republicans as "the Committee of Twelve" of the days of Voltaire, the Reign of Terror and the guillotine during the French Revolution. (p.7)

At this point, I should explain the French Revolution of 1789, not only as a bloody war, but as a religious movement, which finally came to America in 1861. Our War Between the States cannot be understood apart from that earlier revolution.

The French Revolution of 1789 was the first war of its kind in the history of the world. Many wars had been fought in France prior to 1789, but never was there a war like this one. It was the first revolution which had as its express purpose the total overturning of Christianity and a Christian moral order. The wars of the Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries, including the War Between the States, World Wars I and II, are continuations and extensions of that Revolution.

The French Revolution, which led to the tyranny and wars of Napoleon, was inevitable once Europe embraced unbelief and turned from the supremacy of God and the divine authority of the Bible to man and human reason as the supreme gods of the universe. Unbelief unchecked always breeds bloody revolution.

"The Declaration of the Rights of Man and the Citizen" was the confession of faith of the French Revolution. It sets forth the religious and philosophical basis of the revolutionary establishment of a new antichristian order: "Kings, aristocrats, tyrants of every description are slaves in revolt against the Sovereign of the earth, which is HUMANITY, and against the Legislator of the universe, which is REASON." To celebrate their faith in man and nature, the French revolutionaries created a statue of a prostitute and crowned her the goddess, "Reason." They carried this harlot-goddess through the streets, and the crowds bowed in worship and submission before her as she passed.

Over one hundred years before the French Revolution of 1789, during the “Enlightenment,” Europe began her apostasy from the Christian Faith and Worldview. She stopped believing in the sovereignty of God and began believing in the sovereignty of man and the supremacy, not of divine revelation, but of human reason. As a result of its apostasy from the God of the Bible in the hearts and minds of Frenchmen, and other Europeans, the bloody French Revolution was inevitable. God says in Proverbs 8: those who hate Me love death!

One of the most insightful critics of the French Revolution was the Dutchman, Groen Van Prinsterer, (1801-1876), whose book on the revolution is entitled, UNBELIEF AND REVOLUTION. He emphasizes the inevitability of this revolution, because the humanistic worldview of the supremacy of man and human reason of the Eighteenth Century would result in the redefinition of Western Civilization in terms of a self-consciously antichristian worldview, which always is bloody.

With the tree of life planted once more in the European soil by the Reformation all but dead, the ground was ready to receive the deadly seed [of humanism]. Theology, political theory, literature, and education: all these were soon permeated by the new doctrine. This leaven leavened the whole lump. At the outbreak of the French Revolution virtually all of Europe was ripe for upheaval. -The eruption of a volcano is inevitable long before the mountain-mass is torn asunder. The French Revolution was inevitable long before it broke out.

It [the Revolution] is more than just a political revolution ending in democracy.... It is THE Revolution: with its baleful influence which, though tempered in its pernicious effect by the blessings of a higher providence, continues even in our day to frustrate the operation of truly wholesome principles. It is THE Revolution with its systematic application of the philosophy of unbelief; with its atrocities and destructiveness; with its self-deification and its adoration of Reason on the ruins of the ancient state. As early as 1770 the king was told by the clergy: “Impiety bears a grudge against both God and men. It will not be satisfied until it has destroyed all authority, divine and human. It will plunge France into all the horrors of anarchy and give birth to the most unspeakable revolutions.

And now, against this historical backdrop, let us return to the social revolution of the War Between the States. After quoting these men who lived during the time of the War Between the States and Reconstruction., James McPherson gives his own conclusion: the Civil War was indeed the Second American Revolution, [Edmund Burke, an Eighteenth Century critic of the French Revolution, was the first, I believe, to use this term for the War Between the States], if not, in a strict sense, the First [American Revolution]: “The first because the Revolution of 1776 had produced no such changes in the distribution of wealth and power among classes.” (p. 8) He then goes on, in his book, ABRAHAM LINCOLN AND THE SECOND AMERICAN REVOLUTION, to describe how sweeping this revolution was. “The Civil War,” he writes, “DID partially overthrow the existing social and political order of the South—overthrow it at least as much as did the English Revolution of the 1640’s or the French Revolution of the 1790’s. ..The events of the 1860’s in the United States equally deserve the label, revolution....” (p. 21)

One man who lived through, what he called, the maddest, most infamous Revolution in history, was George Ticknor, born in 1791, who was a Harvard historian four years after Appomattox. He wrote that this national trauma had created a great gulf between what happened before in our century and what has happened since, or what is likely to happen hereafter. It does not seem to me as if I were living in the country in which I was born.”- Preface in McPherson’s book. In 1865 Richard Taylor, a Louisiana planter who returned home after four years as an officer in the Confederate Army, wrote to Samuel Barlow: “Society has been completely changed by the war. The [French] Revolution of 1789 did not produce a greater change in the Ancien Regime than has this in our social life.”- McPherson’s Preface. And in 1991, McPherson wrote: “Abraham Lincoln was not Maximilien de Robespierre. No Confederate leaders went to the guillotine. Yet the Civil War changed the United States as thoroughly as the French Revolution changed that country.” (p. viii)

Richard Weaver, (1910-1963), whose books, SOUTHERN TRADITION AT BAY and THE SOUTHERN ESSAYS OF RICHARD M. WEAVER should be read and re-read by every Southerner, and who taught at the University of Chicago for two decades, is one of the most important philosophers of the Twentieth Century. Unashamedly pro-Southern, he also referred to the War as America’s Second Revolution, and stated that “to the extent that the South has preserved social structure and avoided the creation of the masses, it has maintained the only kind of world in which values can long survive.” (p. 20). He explains this statement with this comment: “A society in the true sense must have exclusive minorities of the wise and good who will bear responsibility and enjoy prestige. Otherwise either It will be leaderless, or its leadership will rest on forces of darkness; for there is little difference between the tribal chieftain who wins his place by brute force and the demagogue of the mass state who wins his by appeal to mass appetite. The notion that all ideas of rank are inimical to liberty is found only among those who have not analyzed the relationship between freedom and organization. It is the process of leveling which distorts reality and leaves us with a situation that is, literally, impossible to conceive.” (pp. 20-21). And yet, this leveling is exactly what the North sought to accomplish by war and reconstruction.

Weaver’s thesis is that the North’s attempt to obliterate the Southern social order, which he has just described, and its institutions was a self-conscious assault on the religion of the South, because, he writes, “religion [was] a bulwark of those institutions.” (p. 89) He continues: “a religious solid South preceded the political solid South,” (p. 82), because “reverence for the ‘Word of God’ [was] a highly important aspect of Southern religious orthodoxy.”- (p. 89). “Belief in a revealed knowledge [was] the essence of religion” in the Southern sense. (p.89) But with the rise of Unitarianism in New England, and with it the growing condemnation of the older Christian orthodoxy and Calvinism, so dominant in the South, and the growing appeal of socialism, the North was condemning as error the centuries-old faith in revealed religion which the South was striving to preserve. (p. 91) Conflict was inevitable.

In his historical survey of Southern literature, Weaver concludes: “In broad outline the victory of the Yankee was viewed by the South as a triumph of the forces of materialism, equalitarianism and irreligion.” (p. 206) Weaver tells us that “the French Revolution [with its dedication to destroy a Christian moral and social order and to replace it with a secular one], had not come to the South by 1860.” (p. 207) But it came with all its fury and devastation in the War Between the States and in Reconstruction. “Southerners of the postbellum epoch were men of the Eighteenth Century, [more correctly, of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries with their Protestant Reformation], suddenly transported into a Nineteenth Century world, [with its cold and life-negating humanism, rationalism, materialism, statism and antichristianity].” (p.207)

THOUGHTS ON RECRUITMENT

by Steve Garrett

Future Confederate Sentry Editor

bbethsteve@aol.com

So far in the quest for more troopers and compatriots in the southern cause, the various heritage groups have taken the pragmatic view with regards to recruitment. These groups and individuals with razor sharp precision have explained away their positions on how our cause is still rightful to the sometimes half interested southern majority. So.....here we are, fifteen years later, still just a thin gray line stretched across the Mason-Dixon wondering if we can hold onto that flag over yonder in the cemetery.

So what really is going on here? How come southerners today do not seem to care about their great heritage passed down to them by their glorious ancestors? Does not the vision of General Lee mounted on Traveler not move them in any way? The short answer? No.

Folks, the problems with regards to recruitment are we are aiming for the wrong target. Just watch how most southerners' eyes glaze over as we keep trying to explain away and justify our cause for every right reason in the world. And if we have been able to hold the persons attention at all, in many cases he will probably agree with you.

Victory? No, and therein lies the problem. Ya'll hit the wrong target! Why did you hit the wrong target? Because you were aiming for the wrong target. To sum it up, the heritage groups are trying to win the southern majorities' mind. That means you are trying to get them to agree with you on historical and social issues with regards to the southern cause.

* You will tell them the south was right in her fight for secession? Yes, but so what says the majority. I have kids to take to soccer, ballgame to see, and that new movie to catch at the Windsong theatre tonight.

* But the war for southern independence was not fought over slavery! Yes, that's true, my grandfather told me that, friend, says the woman on the street, but, there is a sale on at Walmart and I cannot miss that for anything. Keep up the good fight sir (smile) Bye.

* Lincoln was a despot and a murderer you finally shout. Well, says the polite southerner, he did invade the south back then, but, things now have changed, friend, time to move on ya think?

So did you catch it? In each of the above scenarios, the southern patriot won the fight. He aimed for his target – the individual's mind, and hit a bull's-eye. They all agreed with him, and then.....they did what they usually do. Move on. People, just because you win someone's mind and get them to agree with you, it doesn't mean they will march into battle with you. It only means you have a valid point.

Now what needs to be done is we as southern patriots need to step back, shake off the dust, reload, and aim for the real target – the target that is guaranteed to bear permanent fruit. People, aim for the southern majorities' heart!

Now what do I mean by that? Simple. With our one and only weapon, which is heritage, we need to begin to use it to appeal to the emotions and imagination of the southern majority, you know, appeal to their heart. We need to bring our people together in an environment of celebration of their southern culture, an event of fun, music, food, and crafts to capture their emotions. I'm talking about a festival. A southern heritage festival is what I'm talking about. You see, the southerner has had his culture successfully severed from his soul by the government, media, and schools. You are not going to pragmatically talk him back into it. What you need to do is reattach him to it through his emotions and imagination. The vehicle to accomplish this is the southern heritage festival.

Folks, think about this for a moment. Say I encourage each of you reading this article to conduct an experiment. Pick a day, any day, and go to your neighbor and tell them there is a gathering being held at the local courthouse to protest the bringing down of the confederate flag on "All Generals Day." See how many volunteers you will get to go with you. Next, invite them to go to a historic presentation at the local library about the "True Cause of the Civil War" and see how many folks want to ride along. Finally, go to those same neighbors and tell them "hey there is a southern heritage festival going on this afternoon at the park. There is gonna be a blue grass band, some re-enactors are going to put on a show, lots of crafts, and barbecue to boot. Now who's interested?"

Once inside this festival, the southerner will see his heritage being put on display before his very eyes. Yes, it's his. He owns it. It's part of him and he is part of it. What has just begun to happen is his southern cultural roots have begun to re-attach to him through music, fun, food, and crafts. He will experience fun and joy to his soul. He is emotionally beginning to reconnect to his culture. Thus, what you have just done is aimed your heritage weapon at the new target. Bull's eye! Ya hit him in the heart, troopers!

Folks, if you win a man's mind, he'll agree with you. But if you win his heart, you will also capture his mind and his body, and therefore, he will march into battle with you. If you reattach the cultural roots to the southerner, he will do what he has always done in the past, rise up and defend his culture.

Now, there is something else at play here, folks. Some will say here, so that's it, music, games, and fun? Nope. What also needs to be at these festivals is the heritage and activist groups with their booths, materials, and the troopers in place. The meat and potatoes of the movement will be there for the majorities' viewing and research pleasure – on their chosen time and terms, meaning this new type of festival has a dual function. First, we get them to come by way of music and fun, but once in, we are set up and ready with our historical and political heritage booths and displays. The fun part of the festivals gets them in and softens them up to be receptive to their true history and heritage.

This is the strategy of connect, secure, and expand.

Ron Paul or the Abyss

By Joe Gresham

dixie_cratt@hotmail.com

The U.S. is at a crossroad, a very serious one. A crossroad which it will likely never have the opportunity to return to.

This presidential election is profoundly pivotal; it will have a lasting effect on the nature of America. It will determine whether or not your children and grandchildren have any shred of freedom, or if they will simply exist under a total and absolute police state.

The American empire has been expanding ever since it was created by Abe Lincoln, nearly 150 years ago. For most of that time, it was, by design, slowly growing, so as not to alarm anyone. But evidently the Global Masters, have decided that the American people are either too stupid, cowardly, or lazy to notice or resist their encroachments. For the past 40 years the empire has become increasingly, oppressive and “in your face” at home and abroad. Today we are on the brink of an all out police state.

Today we are facing an all out assault on EVERY freedom we have ever enjoyed. The freedom of religion, speech, thought, association, to determine our own medical care, or to homeschool or discipline our children, even the freedom to be secure in our homes. The government (empire) wants to not only control and regulate everything, but remain above reproach in doing so.

The Constitution, which is supposed to restrain the government (not the people) is regularly and routinely ignored, as though it didn't exist. Offices, bureaucracies and legislation are constantly being created that blatantly violate the Constitution, and the government acts like that's just fine.

When the people pursue their Constitutional right to petition the government for a redress of grievances, the government simply refuses. They are completely non-responsive and rely on heavy handed bullying tactics to force their will upon the people. And this same arrogant attitude emanates from all branches of government, executive, legislative and judicial. The Global Masters control virtually ALL of them.

We have a certain representative from Texas, who has CONSISTENTLY stood apart from these globalist lackeys, a man of integrity, honor and morality who has ALWAYS used the Constitution as his “yardstick” as to whether legislation should be approved or not. This man is Representative Dr. Ron Paul. Dr. Paul has almost a 20 year record in the House of Representatives, and it is spotless!

This past year, at the urging of many “common folks” Dr. Paul, agreed to run for the Presidency, to try and restore freedom to our republic. He is the one man who can and will get the job done, if afforded the opportunity. He has always supported the individual right to bear arms, private property rights, getting us out of the U.N., individual's right to educate, choose medical and/or nutritional treatment. The abolition of the I.R.S. and the income tax, the return to lawful money, and on and on. In short, anything that's Constitutional, and nothing that isn't....period!

When Dr. Paul first started out on his campaign, he hardly made a “blip on the radar screen”. I, having been a Ron Paul fan for about 10 years was very annoyed that he never got mentioned in the “main stream media” I contacted my local NBC affiliate (WPSD Paducah Ky) and questioned them about this. Their response was something to the effect of “Well he doesn't have the name recognition”, to which I responded, “Well how is he to get the name recognition, if y'all black him out?” The newshore, Griff Potter, then went on to say, “he doesn't have a campaign war chest big enough to fund a serious campaign”. Since that time the black out of everything Ron Paul has continued. And since that time Dr. Paul has TWICE broken the all time campaign fund raising record, and in the final quarter of 2007 raised almost 20 million dollars, more money than any other candidate. He did it without corporate contributions, it was individuals with small donations. Guess what? WPSD and all the others STILL don't mention his name, I wonder what the excuse is now?

Ron Paul has won straw poll after straw poll, hack proof online polls that will not allow a second vote such as a spouse from the same computer, yet the media black out continues.

After “Faux” (Fox) News excluded Dr. Paul from the New Hampshire GOP debate (even though he finished in Iowa way ahead of Rudy Giuliani, who was included) Jay Leno tried to “right an obvious wrong” and had Dr. Paul come and appear on the Tonight Show to give him a little “air time”. WPSD aired local commercials over a portion of Dr. Paul's interview. They claim it was an accident, but I'm not buying it, after encountering their anti Ron Paul bias in the past.

The media doesn't want Ron Paul in the White House, but then neither does any other corporate entity, be it military/industrial, medical, banking, or media, they know he can't be bought. And they will do whatever it takes to keep him out, Whether it's black him out or dream up some “scandal” about him. They will attempt to silence him, marginalize him or destroy him, in any way they can....you can bet on it! Even through election fraud, which has already been documented in New Hampshire. Precincts where there were known votes for Ron Paul, are recorded as having none. What do you think? An accident? I think not!

Ron Paul is THE ONLY candidate that will make a difference, and "the powers that be" are afraid of him, they know he will upset their gravy train. A vote for Ron Paul IS NOT a vote for the status quo, it's a vote for serious change, Constitutional change. If he doesn't win the election, it doesn't matter who does. The only difference in the rest, is the speed at which we travel into the abyss of a total fascist police state. They will all lead us to that destination.

All of the other candidates in both major parties are either members of, or have very close ties to the Globalist/Marxist/Socialist organization the Council on Foreign Relations, they all have a vested interest in advancing the Globalist Masters' agenda, and subverting American sovereignty and freedom.

So many mindless drones allow themselves to be wooed and swayed by who's going to offer them the biggest "something for nothing" prize. Whether it be welfare, food stamps or farm subsidies, it's wrong! But that is what most people fall for when they support a presidential candidate. It's not a legitimate function of government to take my money and give it to you. And while it might improve your situation or comfort in the short term, what are you swallowing or relinquishing in order to receive it? I'll tell you.

You're selling your children and grandchildren into slavery, you're forfeiting not only your liberty, but that of your progeny This Constitutional republic has gotten so far away from the principles upon which it was founded, and the only candidate that will work to restore it is Dr. Paul.

If Ron Paul can't be elected this time, with all the buzz around him on the internet, with all the money he has raised, then we are just too far gone. Then obviously the Global Masters are so powerful and so entrenched that we won't be allowed a decent President. We will NEVER have a Constitutional President! Then the only way to ever have freedom in the U.S. will be through armed revolt.

President Kennedy once said that those who make peaceful revolution impossible make violent revolution inevitable. I am not a Kennedy fan, but he was right on that issue. When it comes right down to it, it's Ron Paul or the abyss!

The Election or the Defection of the Disenfranchised South

Brothers and Sisters of the South, as this election starts to unfold, it appears this could very well be the watershed event that finally awakens the sleeping South. We will - again - be unrepresented in this election. There will be no choice for us. NO TAXATION WITHOUT REPRESENTATION! NO GOVERNMENT WITHOUT REPRESENTATION! NO CHOICE BUT TO FORM OUR OWN GOVERNMENT, or should I say reform that which has lain dormant for lo these 143 years. We the People, in order to form a more PERFECT UNION - a union of like minded, culturally, and morally attuned to the wishes of the great majority of the people of the south - MUST take back our country (fill in the name of your state here _____). Government of the people, by the people, and for the people - to steal from the lying man who said those words - his name will not be spoken here - is the only TRUE basis for government, but it HAS perished from the land. When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the bands that have tied them to another, it is only right and fit that they should be informed of the reasons for that change in government. The change must occur, because "you people" are foreign to us. We don't think alike. We don't talk alike. WE ARE A SEPARATE PEOPLE! Let it be so. Let us stand up together and make it so. THE SOUTH MUST REFUSE TO VOTE FOR A DEMOCRAT OR A REPUBLICAN THIS YEAR! WE MUST VOTE FOR AN INDEPENDENT CANDIDATE (RON PAUL WOULD BE PREFERRED), but irregardless, we must NOT participate in this criminal conspiracy another vote longer! RESIST! REBEL!

A great letter from one who says he doesn't have an article. Imagine if he did ☺

Dear Carolyn,

I don't have an article, but you might want to include www.pacinlaw.org and www.statenationals.net They explain how the 14th. Amendment failed ratification, it was rejected by 17 states and how the 39th & 40th Congress committed treason by stepping out of it's authority and forced unconstitutional reconstruction acts on the southern states imposing martial law in time of peace and physically removing the rightfully elected governments of 10 southern states so as to "implement" the unconstitutional 14th Amendment on them and the rest of America.

The whole political system that is in place today is utterly illegitimate and repugnant to the original de jure constitution for the united states of America and is built upon an amendment that was never ratified as specified in Article V in the Constitution for the united states of America. Not only was the 14th Amendment not ratified, but neither was any Amendment after it! They have a treaties available on the 14th Amendment entitled The Red Amendment that explains everything in detail and how to restore one's rightful nationality by utilizing a law enacted by congress that is 100% legal and is one's right to exercise if one so wishes.

Every American should read and understand this book, especially all us confederates who fight to restore our Constitutional Republic that was stolen from us!!! I have done the process and restored my rightful de jure nationality to that of a Florida national which has been recognized and accepted by the President, the Secretary of State, and the Attorney General of the de facto United States, and the Governor, the Secretary of State, and the Attorney General of the de facto State of Florida. It is the so-called "silver bullet" that all these "patriot" groups have been looking for and is brought to you, the commercial slave, the human resource, also called the legal fiction known as a "U.S. citizen" by the Congress of the United States.

It also explains how the so-called "civil war" was not a civil war, but an international war and that Lincoln and his thugs committed high treason for invading the sovereignty of fellow states, or countries, as recognized by the Constitution and the Law of Nations.

The southern states were not in rebellion, but merely exercising their RIGHT to preserve their Constitutional Republics as founded for us by the founding fathers from tyrannical, unconstitutional garbage that Lincoln and his cronies were forcing upon them. Lincoln had no authority to invade the various Republics of the south!

Proudly a rebel ghost appeared to me today, was riding a horse
and was dressed in grey.
I am a rebel soldier,
flew the flag with pride.
It represents sweet home and all those men who died.
Don't tarnish with ignorance with disrespect and lies.
She's the grand flag of Dixie.
from the day I died.
I held the battle flag
in many battle fore.
I held proud and high
when I lost life in war.
A teacher in a school
said fold that flag away.
I'm a rebel ghost,
the flag's gonna stay.
She never stood for hate,
she was with Bobby Lee.
Let the battle flag fly high for the whole world to see.
She's the flag of our heroes fallen for liberty.

LEAVE ALONE THE PHOENIX

Our generation realizes that although we lost the war, it is up to us to win the peace. Freedom to exercise our right to be left alone is forever the goal of the new confederate government. NO OTHER TIME IN HISTORY has surfaced the needed resources and opportunities. Now, observing the debate between Obama and Hillary, we should decode the message that we have everything we need to restore the original 13 states to freedom and prosperity. There is the background, the history, and the pride that swells out of subjugation and hopelessness. IT grows with every outrage, every flag that burns, and every monument that falls, every case of heritage denial to southern students.

Lets all ponder that a few years ago a concrete wall divided Berlin, that Lithuania, Latvia, Estland were firmly under soviet oppression, no one ever predicted the fall of communism without river of blood. THEN THOSE WHO DARED TO SPEAK inspired faith to many people that thought, then believed, the rest is fodder for history books. It's the same in the former confederacy, first, people must dare to think, second, must dare to speak, then the word must become print so others may be inspired. The next step is for the people to forge a new reality as they believe. Once belief has taken roots, the confederate nation will be a reality. What must be uprooted is the years of indoctrination that thought the southern dream was not practicable. The prophets of doom did their mission well. however, their wall, like Berlin, will crumble. What the alternative reality requires does not particularly take guts, neither takes display of bravery or courage. when someone does not agree with what I say, they usually tell me, sometimes politely, some other times not. Usually, the only wound my detractor tries to inflict is emotional. Sure, sometimes it hurts, but it takes greater effort to remain silent than it does to speak the truth, even when the truth is not popular or politically correct.

Fear always has its price. Some people give way to fear and panic. They deny everything that makes them all they could ever be. What they lose is so much more valuable than whatever they may gain. THEIRS WAS A FUTURE OF PROMISE, theirs is a future where they could have accomplished much more than they ever will as scalawags. By not taking care, or ignoring the issue, they lose that inner strength that would have elevated them above mere men. They reject their homeland, their way of life, their people, as well as their strength. Even a conqueror has no respect for collaborators.

Over eastern Europe, those who chose to sell out to the soviets now live in dim, moldy flats. Theirs is the righteous retirement of a traitor who managed to save his hide. Once, these men were the feared muscle of the soviet empire. Now, their frequent nightmares feature only a potter's field. Selling out is a choice few southerners make. Their heritage and culture are too precious to squander. It is a comfort and a source of strength.

When I was a barefooted teenager in 1944 near the Anzio beach, I saw a burned out Sherman tank, and painted on the turret was the confederate battle flag with written underneath "7th TN cavalry". THIS EPISODE IS familiar to southern fighting men. The beloved and tattered emblem flew from the trenches of France during World War I, to the beaches of Normandy and Italy in 1944, the flag island-hopped the pacific with marines (of the confederate forces of the Solomons), again to hills of Korea, and the jungles of Vietnam. The banner despised in southern schools flew over the desert of the Persian Gulf, and was once painted on a helicopter of the French Foreign Legion, ending 300 miles behind Iraqi lines on the bank of the river Tigris. The confederate battle flag, so despised by southern scalawags and subhuman rights activists, flies wherever men long to be free. It doesn't belong just to the confederates. It is freely shared with every man who dreams of freedom. Berliners hoisted the flag on top of their hated wall. Latvians and people of the Baltic states waved the flag when waving even their own meant death. Throughout the world, people have adopted the banner. It mingles with fleur de lis all over Quebec. Also in Scotland, it is the universal symbol for defiance of tyranny. It has been adopted by the fighters for independence of Biafra. Only in America is it considered negative and offensive. Everywhere else, the confederate battle flag is a symbol of liberty. It must again be a symbol in the southern states. The conqueror and weak-kneed collaborators do not fear the flag, but they fear what that flag can inspire in people.

The truth unmasked shall set free the southern nation. No need to apologise anymore. Refuse to bow and scrape anymore. You are the southern nation, and no matter what Hillary or Obama say, it cannot buck the truth. All you have to do is just stand up.

"My religious belief teaches me to feel as safe in battle as in bed. God has fixed the time for my death. I do not concern myself about that, but to always be ready, no matter when it may overtake me."

Lt. General Thomas "Stonewall" Jackson

Lee at Appomattox

I tried in all my power to avert this war. I saw it coming, and for 12 years I worked night and day to prevent it, but I could not. The North was mad and blind; it would not let us govern ourselves, and so the war came, and now it must go on till the last man of this generation falls in his tracks, and his children seize the musket and fight our battle, unless you acknowledge our right to self-government. We are not fighting for slavery. We are fighting for Independence, and that, or extermination we will have

*Slavery never was an essential element. It was the only means of bringing other conflicting elements to an earlier culmination. It fired the musket which was already capped and loaded. THERE ARE ESSENTIAL DIFFERENCES BETWEEN THE NORTH AND THE SOUTH, THAT WILL, HOWEVER THIS WAR MAY END, MAKE THEM TWO NATIONS
